ALLARD COLLECTS ON C.U.-NEBRASKA GAME WAGER

COLORADO LAWMAKER RECEIVES STEAKS FROM NEBRASKA SENATOR

Washington, D.C. – Colorado U.S. Senator Wayne Allard this week collected his winnings from a friendly wager he had placed with Nebraska U.S. Senator Ben Nelson last week on the outcome of the C.U. - Nebraska football game. Colorado defeated Nebraska 62-36 the day after Thanksgiving in Boulder.

Allard, sporting a “BUFFS” baseball cap and C.U. jacket, received a box of steaks from Nelson in front of the U.S. Capitol. In honor of the victory Senator Allard’s wife, Joan, developed a special recipe for the steaks - “Colorado Peppered Nebraska Steak.”

Nelson, wearing a chief’s hat and barbecue apron, also presented Allard a red rose saying that he hoped Colorado and Nebraska would meet again this year in the Rose Bowl.

“C.U.’s victory over Nebraska last week was of historic proportion,” Allard said while accepting the steak filets from Nelson. “It truly was the game of the century.”

The victory by C.U. over Nebraska gave the Buffs their first ever Big XII Northern Division Championship and earned them a spot in the Big XII Championship game.
